Owned by Webster resident Tim Scahill and managed by Steve Wexler, the Verizon store opened in Tops Plaza Dec. 4 and has seen a steady stream of customers since. “We’ve been very pleased with the traffic,” said Wexler, who returns to the telecommunications business after spending several years with contact-lens manufacturer Bausch & Lomb. “People have been very friendly, people are happy to have a store like this in Ontario.”

Wexler said the store is a Verizon Wireless premier retailer and features Verizon products and services exclusively, which allows the outlet’s employees to give each customer one-on-one attention and provide start-to-finish service. That means that each client will deal with only one staffer during the whole purchase process and won’t be shuffled around from person to person.

“We do it all with a local flavor, and our customers appreciate that they can do business locally with us,” said Wexler, a resident of Brighton.

Scahill said it was actually Verizon corporate that initiated the process in Ontario. He said company officials were the ones who approached him about opening a local outlet. Scahill owns two other businesses in the area that focus on information technology, but he said he’s also been interested in communication systems, which helps him offer more complete service to clients. “For most of my customers, (wireless service) is one more piece we can add to their portfolios,” he said. Scahill said existing customers from nearby towns have already come to the Ontario store for such help. The new Verizon store currently employs two full-time staffers, but Scahill hopes that number will eventually grow to four or five.
